The Women’s Board
The University of Chicago

50th Anniversary Dinner
January 20, 2011
Dear Members of the Women’s Board:

Congratulations to all—members past and present—on the 50th Anniversary of the Women’s Board.

In 1960 the Board of Trustees established the Women’s Board of the University of Chicago for three purposes: To acquaint Women’s Board members with the University’s research, programs, and faculty; to encourage Women’s Board members to advocate for the University; and to strengthen the University through funding of special projects.

Over the last 50 years, the membership of the Women’s Board has evolved to be a mix of alumnae, emeritus faculty, and friends of the University. It is a group that both enlivens and embodies the University of Chicago, and its activities have grown beyond the original goals stated by the Board of Trustees. In events throughout the year as well as at the annual dinner, the Women’s Board brings together a diversity of people in an environment encouraging free exchange of ideas, intellectual challenge, and celebration of the extraordinary contributions of the University of Chicago. The programming is wide-ranging and allows faculty and leaders throughout the University an opportunity to showcase outstanding research and ideas. The Women’s Board encourages members to bring guests from the community to events, and as a result these events engage not just the University of Chicago but the city of Chicago and its residents as well.

The Women’s Board continues to expand its interests and its impact. It has raised more than $6 million in student aid and programmatic support. The University depends on the type of dedication and inspired philanthropy that the Women’s Board has demonstrated in its half century, and I am confident that its impact and support will only grow.

On behalf of the University of Chicago community, I offer my warmest congratulations on a half century of ambition and success. Your work and contributions have a meaningful impact on the campus community and all those who are touched by your efforts.

I wish you well for the next 50 years and beyond.

Sincerely,

Robert J. Zimmer
Letter from the Chair

Dear Friends,

Tonight we proudly celebrate the 50th Anniversary of the University of Chicago Women’s Board with an extraordinary evening featuring the University’s president, Robert J. Zimmer, and past presidents Hanna Gray, Hugo Sonnenschein, and Don Randel, in a conversation with moderator Ray Suarez on the evolution and future of universities. We are so thrilled that they are here to help us celebrate this momentous occasion.

The mission of the Women’s Board is the same today as it was at its founding in 1960: To be ambassadors of the University, and to strengthen the University by funding significant and worthy projects.

It is our privilege to award annual grants in the areas of faculty research and support, the arts and cultural institutions, student life, and community outreach. In our 50 years we have granted more than $6.6 million supporting 430 projects. This past year alone, we funded 18 proposals for a record $401,730. These monies have touched almost every corridor of the University, supporting such projects as:

- Research on advanced treatment for late-stage cancer
- Digital Media Archives to preserve endangered languages
- Sponsorship of The Illusion at Court Theatre and “Cosmophilia” at the Smart Museum
- STRIVE, a program that helps low-income teens with sickle cell anemia learn how to manage their disease through peer support, mentoring, and tutoring
- Urban Education Institute’s 6to16 Mentor Program

In every instance these important projects embody the Women’s Board commitment to fund “but for” projects—projects that would not proceed or thrive without our support. Steve Camp, executive director of the Oriental Institute, writes in a thank-you to the Women’s Board, “The Women’s Board grants we’ve received have led to significant awards from grantors such as the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Science Foundation, the Mellon Foundation…. In effect, the Women’s Board awards have acted like seed funding for these projects, which produced results that allowed for the submission of larger requests. This has been true for the Persepolis project, Tell Edfu, and the Hamoukar excavation in Egypt. All of these went on to receive significant awards that ramped up the work on the projects and has made them sustainable. The Women’s Board made this possible.” We could not offer this critical support to the University without the great generosity and commitment of our membership.
Even in this period of significant economic challenge, we were successful in raising an additional $1 million. The generosity of our members, paired with a challenge grant from the Pioneer Fund and a matching donation from the University of Chicago Board of Trustees Odyssey Scholarship Challenge, allowed us to reach this significant goal. Monies raised will provide an endowed $1 million Women’s Board Scholarship Fund, to support a student from the Chicago Public Schools and the Collegiate Scholars Program in perpetuity at the University of Chicago. This is our gift to the University in honor of the Women’s Board 50th Anniversary.

Our more than 490 members are attracted to the board by the opportunity to enjoy our many extraordinary, wide-ranging programs and the ability to meet a diverse group of intellectually engaged women. Ronne Hartfield, a Women’s Board Steering Committee member, reflects so eloquently on how she sees the meaning and value of the board: “When I first joined the Women’s Board well over a decade ago, I saw my participation as a welcome opportunity to broaden and deepen my thinking outside of the boundaries of my professional life. Brilliant speakers brought new insights and an introduction to current scholarly inquiry that enhanced my awareness in a wide range of fields. Another strength of the Women’s Board is the diversity of background, age, and history represented in this group, which is itself a resource for endless cross-generational sharing and learning. I feel privileged to be a part of the University of Chicago Women’s Board. I think we all do.”

The Women’s Board’s many accomplishments would not be possible without our loyal and wonderfully supportive members, to whom I give my profound thanks. I am also grateful to the Steering Committee, whose members provide such thoughtful guidance and wisdom in a setting of lively discussion, and to our Projects Committees, including recent past chairs, Connie Coolidge and Alice Sabl, for their balanced and careful decisions. We are fortunate to have our capable and dedicated staff—Executive Director Bonita Mall, Abby Coyne, Dorothy Burnett, and, from Special Events, Adam Nemec. It is a privilege to work with them.

I hope you take pride, as I do, in the many shared accomplishments of the Women’s Board. I invite everyone to enjoy this remarkable evening, as we celebrate and toast the first 50 years of the University of Chicago Women’s Board, and look forward with anticipation and enthusiasm to all we will accomplish in the next 50 years.

Warmly,

Jill F. Levi

History

Formally established in 1960 by the Board of Trustees of the University of Chicago, the Women’s Board was designed to personally acquaint its members with the University’s research, programs, and faculty; to encourage members to serve as advocates for the University to the larger community; and to strengthen the University through funding special projects supporting student life, community outreach, education, and academic research.

The Women’s Board has been guided by women whose fervent belief in its mission and devotion to the University have resulted in the substantial growth over time of both membership and philanthropic support of the University.

Since our founding, the Women’s Board has been led by the following women: *

Mary Ward Wolkonsky (1961–69)
Nora Ranney (1969–73)
Ruth Moore Garbe (1973–77)
Anita (Onnie) Darrow (1977–81)
Lorraine Parsons (1981–84)
Lyndy Bogert (1984–87)
Louise Glasser (1987–91)
Sonja Hammer Fischer (1991–94)
Iris Witkowsky (1994–97)
Diana Hunt King (1997–2000)
Joan Feitler (2000–04)
Katharine L. Bensen (2004–07)

‡ Deceased
Mary Ward Wolkonsky was an extraordinary woman who throughout her life offered her talents in a multitude of community service activities, particularly those that advanced the role of women. Mrs. Wolkonsky loved Chicago and she made a major and lasting contribution to the educational and philanthropic world in the city.

She was married to J. Harris Ward, who was a chairman of the board of Commonwealth Edison, as well as a University of Chicago trustee (1956–74). He died in 1975, and in 1980 she married Peter Wolkonsky, a retired medical director of Amoco Oil Company who had earned his undergraduate and medical degrees at Chicago.

Founding the University of Chicago Women’s Board in 1960, she served as its chair for eight years. Under her leadership, Women’s Board members contributed $200,000 in 1968 to renovate a Chicago landmark: the Lorado Taft Midway Studios—the very first project funded by the board.

Named a University of Chicago trustee in 1975, she chaired the University’s Visiting Committee to the Department of Music and founded the department’s Chicago Jazz Archive (now part of the University’s Special Collections Research Center). She also served on the board of International House.

Her commitment to the city of Chicago was equally long-standing. In 1948 she founded Know Your Chicago, not only as a way to share her excitement about the city, but also to educate women for civic participation. Know Your Chicago continues today through the University’s Graham School of General Studies. Mary also founded Bright New Cities, a series of lectures and seminars on the physical and cultural aspects of Chicago. She was a member of the Board of Directors of the Lyric Opera and was instrumental in creating its Women’s Board. She served on the boards of the Chicago Public Library Foundation, the Chicago Symphony, the Council on Foreign Relations, the Field Museum, the Art Institute of Chicago, and Planned Parenthood.

Mary Ward Wolkonsky, a Life Trustee of the University, died in 2002 at the age of 94. Her numerous awards and honors are a testament to her vision and character.
Programs

Women’s Board members are invited to lectures given by University faculty members and to special programs involving the University’s cultural institutions, such as the Oriental Institute, the Smart Museum of Art, and Court Theatre. Our lectures feature some of the world’s foremost experts in their fields, and the topics are clearly pertinent to today’s economic, international, political, cultural, or scientific issues. These gatherings not only enrich members’ and guests’ understanding and appreciation of the University and the world at large but also enable participants to share with others the important research and thinking at one of the world’s leading universities. In addition, the programs offer the opportunity to spend time with other intelligent and interesting women who share a keen interest in the University.

Here is a sampling of the Women’s Board program offerings over the past 50 years:

1961 George W. Beadle: What Does a Geneticist Do?

1965 W. Barnett Blakemore and Paul Tillich: Two Protestant Delegates View the Vatican Council

Daylong tours and programs have included:

2005 Crab Tree Farm, hosted by Neville Bryan

2006 Argonne National Laboratory Tour

2008 Recognition Luncheon for members of 40 years or more, hosted by Janet Duchossois

2008 Tour of Harlowarden’s Edwardian Era Japanese Tea Garden, hosted by Susan Higinbotham
The membership currently numbers 492. Significantly, only 35 to 45 percent of our members have a prior relationship to the University, either as alumnae, spouses of alumni, or members of committees. What all of our members share is a strong intellectual curiosity, an involvement in community and civic affairs, and a desire to be ambassadors for the University by sharing its important work and supporting the philanthropic mission of the Women’s Board.

Projects and Fundraising

The fact that the University of Chicago Women’s Board raises significant funds to assist the University’s broader agenda is, of course, a fundamental dimension of our mission. That primary commitment allows us to be of authentic value to many important projects that need our support. The Women’s Board is proud to fund special projects for the University, both on campus and in the surrounding neighborhoods. Initially, the Board raised money over several years and then made a sizable gift. For example, in 1968 the first cumulative gift of $200,000 funded the renovation of the Lorado Taft Midway Studios, and then another large gift in 1973 of $154,000 furnished the Woodlawn Social Services Center. The Women’s Board began disbursing monies annually in 1974. During the mid 1970s and the 1980s, the amount distributed each year varied widely, from $25,000 to just over $101,000.

In many cases, projects might not go forward without our financial support. Because our ability to fund these deserving projects depends solely upon the money we raise from our members, we ask our members to give generously to the Women’s Board. Members’ financial support of our projects is in addition to the other contributions they may make to the University. Active Women’s Board member households have contributed more than $407 million in lifetime giving to the University of Chicago. Unlike many organizations, the Women’s Board raises funds exclusively from its own membership, allowing each charitable contribution to go directly toward funding the year’s chosen University projects.
Since the Women’s Board was founded, both the funds raised and the number of projects supported have steadily increased.

The increase in fundraising levels during 2009 and 2010 reflects the Women’s Board/Odyssey Scholarship Challenge campaign.
Over the years the Women’s Board has raised a total of $6.628 million to support 430 projects. Our members’ philanthropy has allowed us to award larger grants and greatly increase our impact and effectiveness. In Spring 2010 the Women’s Board received an unprecedented 54 project proposals seeking more than $2 million in grants. There are many reasons for this historic level of requests, but among them is the fact that the Women’s Board has become an increasingly visible entity across campus. In the 1990s annual funding more than doubled, from $99,000 per year to over $200,000. Since 2005 we have seen dramatic increases in support from our members, and in 2010 we were able to award $401,730, testifying to the enduring commitment of the Women’s Board and its partnership with the University.

A sampling of the projects across campus and throughout the community we have funded are given below:

Faculty Research and Support
- Thirty Million Words: Enhancing the Early Language Milieu of Children Living in Poverty
- Improved Imaging of Ovarian Cancers Using Tumor Specific Delivery of Contrast Agents Development of Next-Generation PET System
- Department of Organismal Biology and Anatomy: Student Cleaning and Reconstruction of Nigersaurus Dinosaur

Arts and Cultural Institutions
- Oriental Institute: “The Origins of Writing Across the Ancient Middle East” exhibition; a Compact Phoenix laser system; repair of plumbing at Chicago House in Luxor, Egypt
- Court Theatre: Sponsorship of the following plays: Thyestes, The Illusion, and In the Penal Colony
- Smart Museum of Art: Support for “Cosmophilia: Islamic Art from the David Collection” and “Echoes of the Past: The Buddhist Cave Temples of Xiangtangshan” exhibitions; art-storage racks to provide access to large-scale work of Chinese photography
- Putting the Library’s Manhattan Project materials on World Wide Web; Chicago Jazz Archive Digitization Project

Community Outreach and Support
- Pediatric immunization program at Robert Taylor Homes
- Urban Education Institute (UEI) 6to16 Mentor Program
- Family Resource Center
- A statewide early intervention initiative to prevent Shaken Baby Syndrome

Student internships through these programs:

Human Rights, Career Advising and Planning Services (multiple summer internships for College students and the Jeff Metcalf Fellows Program), Court Theatre, Biological Sciences TEACH Research Project, and the Center for the Study of Race, Politics and Culture.

Renovation and renewal projects such as:

renovation of Midway Studios, funding for a new dome for Yerkes Observatory, North Reynolds Club lounge renovation, a new floor for the Ida Noyes dance room, paneling of Kent Hall in the Chemistry Department, a microphone system for Mandel Hall, and the renovation of Assembly Hall studio space at International House.
In 2005, the Women’s Board received an anonymous donation of $100,000. Wanting the gift to have lasting impact, our Steering Committee voted to create the Women’s Board Scholarship Fund. Four years later, the trustees of the Pioneer Fund, a charitable foundation established by the late Helen McLoraine, a long-standing major supporter of the University of Chicago and a Women’s Board member for more than 25 years, elected to make a gift of $250,000 to the Women’s Board Scholarship Fund. The gift came with a stipulation that the Women’s Board raise $175,000 from its members by June 30, 2010, above and beyond their annual gifts. We met that goal and then exceeded it.

Meeting the Pioneer Fund challenge had a double impact because the $500,000 in Pioneer Fund and Women’s Board gifts was matched by the Odyssey Trustee Scholarship Challenge. The Women’s Board now has an endowed scholarship fund of more than $1 million. The fund will provide scholarships for three students from the Chicago Public Schools’ Collegiate Scholars Program to attend the University of Chicago. Founded in 2003, the Collegiate Scholars Program identifies and prepares talented Chicago public high school students to apply and succeed at the nation’s top colleges and universities by focusing on advanced academics, college prep, community service, arts and culture, and career exploration.

By making an education in the College accessible to the brightest, most qualified young people, regardless of their ability to pay, we enrich our community and further the University’s work.
Thank you to those Women’s Board members and friends who supported the Women’s Board Scholarship Fund.
